Here and There

AS NEW PUBLISHERS of the Spectator we find that one of the best things about the job is watching the antics of our newsboys.

In an attempt to brief the young sprouts on our first issue last week we came upon this one.

A brown-eyed hope of the future listened earnestly as we explained: "Tell them the paper is under new ownership -- this is the new Spectator, crammed full of new features and so forth.

When we finished he shifted his feet and asked:

"Mister, how thick is it gonna be?"

AT FIRST it was hard to tell the youngsters apart. Some were light and some dark and came in assorted sizes. All, however, had the lungs of a dictator.

One of the first to separate himself from the rest was a lad, who turned out to be a super salesman.

He would sell ten Spectators and then come back to the office "to rest" before going out to sell some more.

One of the boys new to the job asked him how he did it: "Why should I tell you?" he shrugged. "Does Macy's tell Gimbel's?"

ANOTHER BOY, new but enterprising, showed up with two pair of signs strung sandwich-board style over his chest and back.

"Buy your new Spectator here, 10¢," it read.

So far we have not run into a situation similar to that which which occurred at last year's Bach Festival.

One young businessman was doing fine, until he became aware that the potential customers were favoring a red-haired minx, age 4.

Her sales line was unique.

As each person passed, she handed him a Spectator. They were accepted as a matter of course until someone asked: "How much?"

"Mmmmm? replied the small one scuffing her shoes in the dirt.

"Dodt you get some money for these?" the customer persisted.

"Oh, no!" was the reply.

It turned out she had been given them to hold by her older brother, who had gone off to play "with the boys."

• • •

MRS. LAUGHTON HEDRICK, of Salt Lake City, staying at the Cypress West. She will be joined later by her husband, the Texas oil man.

MIKE GOULD, former publisher of the Spectator, is now a big television tycoon. He's a partner in Al Buffington Productions, which produces and sells TV shows in Hollywood. And that ain't all: Mike says he has his eye on Tahiti, next. Do they have television in Tahiti?

EARL AND ETHEL GLENNON flew to New York Monday on their semi-annual buying trip. Their daughter, Marjorie, plans to meet them in Manhattan if she can break away from her duties at the Cleveland Playhouse, where she has a two-year fellowship.

COMPLAINT BY VISITORS: Not enough telephone booths in the central part of the village. Also, outside of bus station and hotels, late at night, there is only a single booth on San Carlos upwards from Sixth.

SUGGESTION: If new booths erected, they harmonize with local architecture.

JULIUS DE VARA, well-known Carmel maitre d'hotel, was busy with paint brushes this week, preparing for the opening of the new dining room at the Cypress West, Saturday night. It will be under the management of De Vara and his wife.

COP COURTESY -- Lights flashing, a Carmel police cruiser stopped an out-state automobile the other night. The young couple in the car couldn't figure out why. Turns out, the policeman thought they'd lost their way and wanted to help them out.

"People get lost lots around here," he said, "and some of them drive around and around, especially late at night when there's nobody to ask for directions. I try to help 'em out. I hope I didn't give you a scare."

BILLY BURKE of the Carmel Hardware tells this story of how he got into business here for himself. About 20 years ago, he was walking along a Carmel street one day when a stranger stopped him and asked: "Are you the guy that's going to buy me out?"

Burke said: "I don't know you from Adam, but what have you got?"

"That little hardware store across the way," was the answer.

So Burke took the money he'd saved up to buy a Buick and w into business instead. He says he still doesn't have a Buick.

CARMEL COOKING NOTE: Local woman, who prefers to remain unidentified, tells a story on herself. Seems she heard that it's a good idea to add marbles when you're cooking up a mess of apricot jam; the heat activates the marbles and keeps the jam from sticking.

This she did. Then she canned the jam. Then she slapped her forenead, aghast. "What," she asked herself, "did I do with the marbles?" And the answer came, in a still, small voice: "You probably left them in the jars of jam."

Only thing she could do after that - to save her family and friends from broken dentures -- was label the jars, "Eat at your own risk."

In this case, there were no marbles missing. Or were there?

THE GEORGE HART MANSION on Seventeen Mile Drive was featured last week in a Saturday Evening Post article on Previews Inc., the world's most fabulous real estate office. Article was entitled "They Sell Mansions to Millionaires."

ONE OF THE UNIQUE THINGS about Carmel has always been the odd fact that many front doors on houses aren't where front doors are commonly supposed to be; they're either in the back, leading through the garage or situated as entrances to bedrooms.

But now we've heard everything. Down Carmel Highlands way, there's a house whose front door leads into the fireplace. And on a cold night - watch out!

SAID A CARMEL MOTHER whose small daughter was visiting her at her place of business, "I'll bet there isn't another desk in town as messy as this one of mine."

Replied the daughter, matter-of-factly, "Oh, yes, there is, Mother: your other desk, at home."

MISS RHEINGOLD OF 1950 is now in the champagne class. She is staying at the Highlands Inn with her husband, F. Killeen. They live in Beverly Hills.

ALSO AT THE HIGHLANDS INN are Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Pratt of New York City and the Young and Rubicam Advertising Agency. Attention Mr. Pratt: The Spectator is open from six a.m. to midnight.

MR. AND MRS. DOUGLAS GRANT of Carmel, who habitually spend six months out of every year in England, are at the Holiday Inn for their final days of their present Carmel session.

THE QUEEN FOR A DAY ruled temporarily this week at the Mission Inn. She is Mrs. June Fidroeff, whose husband, Wilfred came with her from Los Angeles.

BACK AGAIN IN CARMEL are Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Mac Donald of Oakland. They are at the Lobos Lodge. MacDonald is a P. T. and T. official.

FIRST LT. PIERRE (SCOTTY) MACBETH has returned to Pebble Beach after 8 months in the Far East. A Carmel Ski Club member, he recently participated in the Army ski meet at Hoshido, Japan. He is the son of Mrs. George MacBeth.

IN THE FEBRUARY 20 ISSUE of The Spectator was an item inquiring into the whereabouts of a man named Roeder Stinson, who, sought by an insurance agency, was supposed to be a Peninsula resident. "If you can find him," read the item, "please get in contact with one of the librarians at the Harrison Memorial Library."

Miss Elizabeth Niles, Carmel librarian, takes the story from there. "Marian Todd came to tell me that she knew the Stinsons years ago. She gave me the name of a Mrs. Elisa Stinson and a San Francisco address.

"I wrote to Mrs. Stinson and received an answer. She told me that she and her family had lived in Carmel 20 years ago, and that her son, Roeder, now lives in Alameda. The son was eight years old 20 years ago, so naturally he had left no forwarding address with the post office.

"My final act was to send Mrs. Stinson's letter to the insurance company, which has an annuity for Roeder."

So now the library has added "Missing Persons Bureau" duties to its multitudinous functions.

BUSINESSMEN BACK PARKING SURVEY, SET $500 LIMIT

Another basic hurdle in solving Carmel's parking problem was taken this week.

The Carmel Business Association, holding their quarterly meeting at the Highlands Inn authorized paying half the cost of a survey to determine the village's parking needs.

The action followed authorization by the City Council last week to pay the other half.

A restriction of a $500 ceiling for their share was placed by the Association. This was based on information received by President Arne Halle that two San Francisco Bay area firms are willing to do the job for $750 and $950 respectively.

The survey is considered as the first step in the formation of a parking district here to build parking lots in the business zone.

At present a petition sponsored by the association, under the chairmanship of Harold Nielsen, is now on file with the Council.

Nielsen told the association members that 35 per cent of property owners in the business zone have signed the petition. -- Another way of saying it is that of the village's $2,400,000 assessed valuation in the business zone, $932,000 is in favor.

Arne Halle, after taking time out to scold absent members -- only 35 businessmen, including their wives, were on hand to vote on the important issue -- outlined the next "businesslike steps to be taken."

If the petition is in order the Council will accept it and then hold public hearings to determine if 51 per cent of the property owners are in favor of creating a parking authority.

Meeting success a parking authority would be appointed. It would have the right to buy and condemn property for parking use.

Street Bill Fought

Cries of "don't let them take it away" were voiced by the Carmel Businessmen's Association this week.

They were in protest to a bill pending before the State legislature calling for uniformity of streets and house numbering throughout the State.

According to City Attorney Thomas Perry, the bill would strip the city of $15,000 State gas taxes now used for paving

$67.276 CONTRACT AWARDED TO BUILD RIVER SCHOOL

The Carmel School Board this week awarded the contract to build the River School.

Low bidder was Contractor Jake Huizenga with a bid of $67,276 for the five unit school of frame construction. The next low bid was that of W. J. Nicholson Co., totaling $68,147.11.

Construction of the school house to be located on Monte Verde in the Mission Ranch Subdivision is to start Monday with completion scheduled in time for use next Fall.

The school which will include four classrooms and an administrative office will corral elementary students through the sixth grade.

A new construction feature will be the use of plastic tile for floors instead of asphalt. According to Superintendent Stuart Mitchell it will eliminate waxing.

SPRING STUFF

LAST SATURDAY, remember, was the perfect day. Plenty of sun, no wind, half the populace in shorts. "We've had wonderful weather all winter, but never like this!" the natives were exclaiming.

As for the tourists who were lucky enough to pick that weekend of all weekends for a Peninsula tour, they probably went away thinking Carmel's weather is salubrious all the time.

Knowing better, we were amazed to find such a good and complete stock of spring and summer washables in every specialty shop on Ocean Avenue and environs. "I know about tourists from Texas and Southern California," we said to the proprietress of one of them. "But what about us who live here all the time? How often can we wear cottons and linens?"

The lady, that day, was dressed in silk, her assistant in a cool, summery cotton. The look they gave us was pitying, but patient. "On warm days you wear a cotton. When the wind comes up or the fog rolls in, you add a cardigan sweater. And don't you usually go where it's warm on your summer vacation?" said one of them.

Undoubtedly their argument was irrefutable. We continued our rounds of the shops with an open mind.

At Maxine's we found a wide selection of cottons, figured denims, shantungs, nylon prints and the like, one-piece and separate. Of the latter, we did our drooling over a puff-sleeved, low-necked full-skirted glazed cotton which seemed to come in several polka-dotted color combinations. Our choice was chartreuse on gray, but others might prefer orange on brown or yellow on red. Costs $15.95.

THE BANBOX ON OCEAN has linens, some non-crushable and washable, cottons of all types, and so on, but seems to have gone in for denim, in particular, in a big way. One wraparound denim dress at $14.95 reminded us of Joseph's coat of many colors, the rich colors appearing in stripes. The design also comes in a skirt at $12.00.

Though our mission in writing this column has only to do with looking, we sometimes find ourself perilously close to buying. This happened at Putnam and Raggett's when we came across, in a rack bulging with nice spring things, a dressy little gray-and-silver striped frock in pure silk, as cool as a candy stick. It includes a red velveteen belt, bears a Justin McCarthy label and sells for $22.95. It also comes in red and white.

The Carmel Dress Shop has some interesting things in washable, rather rough-surfaced linen, most intriguing of which, perhaps, is a set of separates with the South American influence. For $29.50 you get a full red skirt shot with white and two tiers of white fringe at the bottom, plus a white sleeveless off-shoulder blouse shot with matching red. It's a Greta Slattery original.

ON THE SAME SIDE of the street Kramer's seems to deal almost exclusively in separates, selling them individually. A white mogyashel linen skirt with a windowpane check, at $22.95, went well, we discovered, with a white or colored Lanella washable flannel skirt or blouse at $13.95. We don't play golf, but we could see the possibilities here for a good golf costume. Cool, too.

This new local feature is for the aid of shoppers. It contains no advertising. The Window Shopper gathers and selects her material freely in keeping with the Spectator's policy of editorial independence.

Helen Dean's Cinderella Shop has some rather good stuff in cottons and silks, the former ranging from $10.95 up. A line they call "wall-flower prints" - lush flower prints, for the most part, on white backgrounds, (though they have others) - caught our eye. They're in different styles and vary in price according to the grade of cotton.

Bypassing Mahar's and the Country Shop (you'll find their spring things, which were shown at the La Playa luncheon on Tuesday, reviewed elsewhere on this page), we covered Derek Rayne's women's department. Specializing in button-up-the-front classics, this shop has variations on the theme - some severely tailored, some with softer lines, in cotton, a rayon-acetate combination and gabardine. Our choice was one in natural cotton mesh with brown leather belt at $41.95.

Though Eva Sorey at Vanity Fair had scads of dresses in the materials we had been fingering all afternoon, we found ourself more fascinated with a suit than anything else. It was a three-piece affair -- two pieces pure Irish linen, and one piece (the print blouse) pure silk. There was a cape bolero and a pencil-slim skirt, and the price tag said $45.00. Designed by Irene Saltern, Eva said. We liked the one in moss-green, but it comes in royal blue, too.

Tiny Anna Katz had had a busy day. When we pounded on her door a few minutes past 5:30, she looked as though she didn't care if she never saw another customer in her life. "Hundreds of them! Hundreds of them!" she wailed, not too unhappily. Then she showed us what she had in cottons and silks. More on the summer side were some flamboyant hand-blocked Hawaiian prints made in Honolulu. They vary in price and style; some are sarongs, some not. You'd have to see them to judge.

WE WERE STOPPED by the print dress in Lanz Shop window and went in to find out the price. The print, a sort of purplish blue blue on yellow, had no discernible theme, but the little castles and elephants and mermaids and other unrelated subjects were charming. The dress itself is a sleeveless peasant type, trimmed with white rickrack braid and those little Lanz-type heart-shaped buttons. The price is $14.95, and there are matching sandals and a bag for extra.

Much of a cotton called "Everglaze" that we found around town is that sort of quilted material which looks like that stuff you find in candy boxes. A fabric we liked better is the new "taffetized" chambray, and we saw it in a dressy, demure, Susie Brooks teen-age frock at Gladys McCloud's. Chocolate colored and trimmed in white, it had a Peter Pan collar and full skirt for $10.98. If our eleven-year niece were a little older ....

Helen Carter, who has numerous casual cottons has also, in the dressier line, some tricky new fabrics, among them a horsehair effect over taffeta and what can only be described as a "cellophane applique." More wearable, we thought, was a very iconoclastic thing called "Madagascar straw." The example we saw was a two-piece navy with a full skirt and a fitted, almost bra-type top. There is also a felt-and-sequin applique up the front in green, white and shocking pink. Costs $49.95.

Finally, footsore and weary (as who isn't after a day of shopping?), we hit Harriet Duncan's, where it didn't take us more then two split seconds to pick out a fine blue-and-white checked gingham for our own. Its two pieces include a full, whirly quilted skirt and sleeveless blouse for $29.95, and if you want to extend the outfit there's a long-sleeved shirt for $9.95.

Peter Hensel Wins Audubon Contest

Peter Hensel, sixth grader at Sunset School was the first prize winner in his age group this week of the Conservation Poster Contest sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society.

Some 50 posters from 4th, 5th 6th and 7th graders on the Peninsula and in the Salinas Valley were entered.

The winning posters will be displayed at the Monterey Library for the rest of this month.

A well-balanced mixture of woolens and summer fabrics - something for any sort of a day in Carmel, almost any season of the year - carried the theme of Tuesday's luncheon style show at Hotel La Playa far beyond its original intent.

Called "The Easter Parade," the event featured not only casual, cruise and dressy frocks from the Country Shop, but also skirts, sweaters, suits, coats and shoes from Mahar's, some of which might be worn from now through fall.

The audience, overflowing into the bar and card room, was a fashion show in itself. A hundred or so local women appeared in a variety of fresh, new styles, with those wearing hats not outnumbering those without.

Baby orchids appeared at each place setting, and orchid leis were provided for the models by Ashton Stanley, who presented them at intervals when Mrs. Stanley, commentator for the day, called over the P.A. system, "Get ready, boys!" or,

RECREATION DIRECTOR POST TO BE DISCUSSED TONIGHT

Should Carmel have a year-round recreation director?

This question will be discussed in detail at 7:30 tonight when representatives of government and civic groups meet with Louis Means, consultant in recreation from the State Department of Education at the High School Cafeteria.

Among the agencies and organizations represented will be the City Council, the County supervisors, the recreation commission, school board, youth center and various service clubs.

The public is invited to attend.

Urgency of the need for an immediate decision is due the fact that George Mosolf, Carmel's recreation director in former summers, will not be here this year.

Under discussion, in addition to the summer problem, will be the advisability of instituting a year-round after-school program for the junior high school group.

Tau Mu Style Show Coming Up Tuesday

Though set for March 17, Tau Mu's annual spring charity fashion show will not have a St. Patrick's day decoration theme this Year. Instead, the Easter bunny will have his day.

With "Spring Magic" as the title, the show will start at 1 PM in the administration building at the Monterey County Fairgrounds. Holman's will provide the styles.

Chairman is Mrs. Noble Barter of Pacific Grove. She is assisted by Mrs. John Nelson of the Grove and Mrs. Robert Brown and Mrs. Kenneth White of Carmel, who will also model.

Other models are the Mesdames Richard Brautigam, Herbert Schmalanberger, Robert Pickett, Arthur W. Barter, Jr., Ernest Watson, Vincent Selbicky and Mary Flannigah, and the Misses Theresa Peters and Karen Barter.

Children who will model are Jeannie Parsons, Marlo Griffin, Barbara Mann, Gayle Jasper, Henry Smith and Robert Phillips.

Reservations may be made through Mrs. Robert Pickett (2-7804) or Mrs. Stanley Bishop, (7-4233).

St. Patrick's Dance In Carmel Valley

Members of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel Church and their friends will hold a St. Patrick's Dance tomorrow night at the Rancho Del Monte Country Club in Carmel Valley.

Ladies of the parish will serve a supper. Dance music will be played by the De Maria Bros. The floor show will be under the direction of Capt. Robert Bigelow of the Fort Ord Special Services detachment.

A purebred Hereford Heifer, donated by the Violini Bros. of Carmel Valley, and a Hampshire Hog, given by Father Ignatius Loughran, will be given away as prizes.

The party will be open to the public. Admission costs $1.50.

Ski Club Holds Ship-Wreck Party

Tonight, members of the Carmel Ski Club will be ship-wrecked at the Mission Ranch.

They'll turn the famous establishment into a South Sea Island, complete with Hula dancers (both male and female), and an assortment of other acts, such as may be unreasonably expected by a modern Robinson Crusoe when he washes up on a foreign shore.

EXCHANGE STUDENT IS LECTURE TOPIC

Dr. Remsen Bird will speak on "The Exchange Student, The Unofficial Ambassador" at the annual meeting of the World Affairs Council of the Monterey Peninsula.

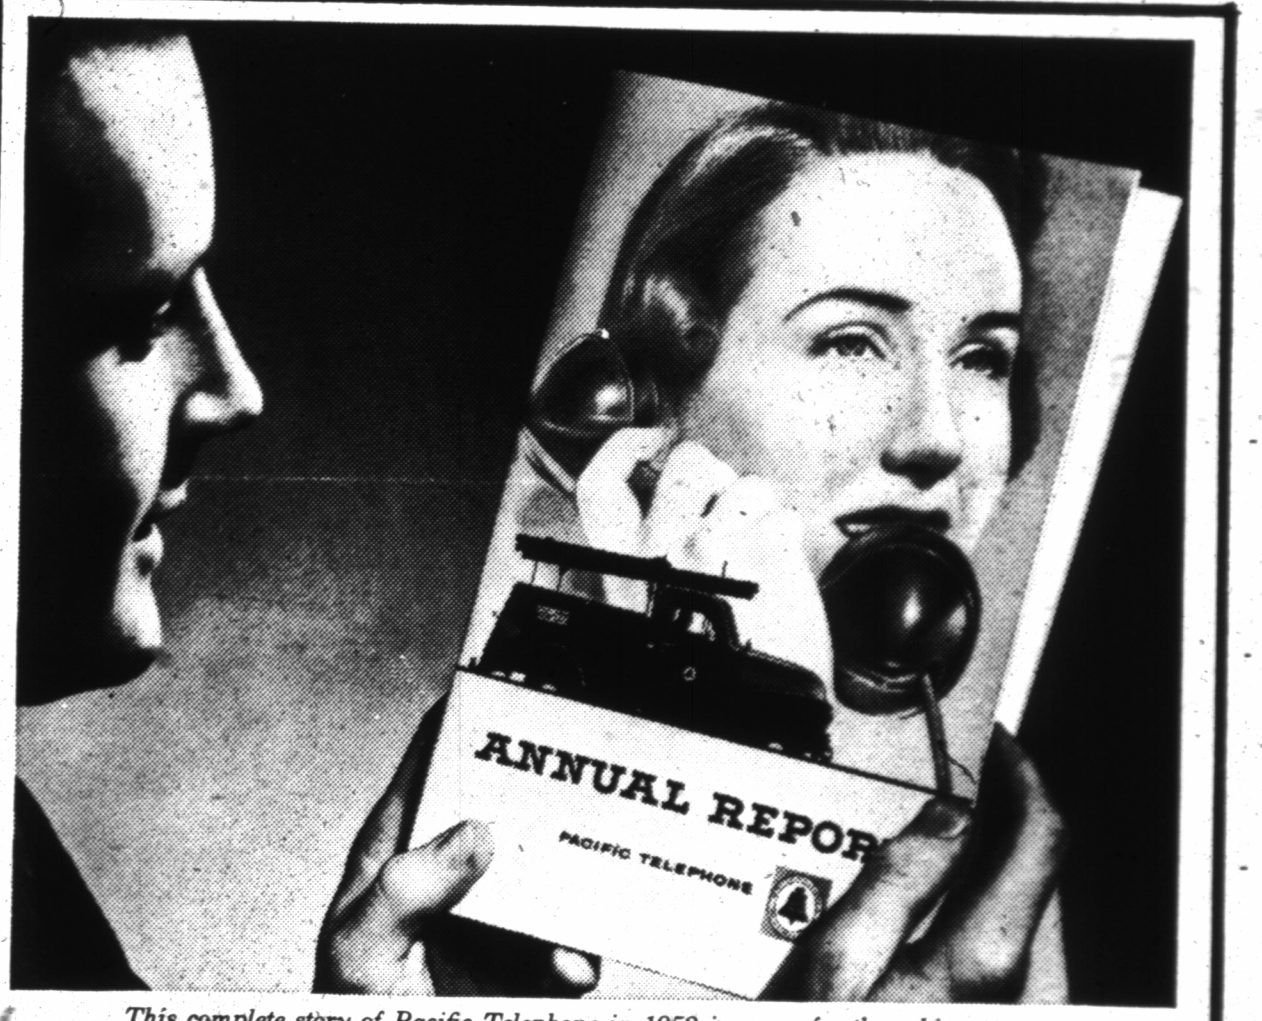
The meeting is set for Monday evening, March 16, in the All Saints Church parish hall, with president Reuben Johnson presiding.

All members are urged to attend. There will be an election at 7:30 to fill vacancies on the board of directors, and Dr. Bird will speak at 8.

Dr. Bird recently returned from an extensive tour of France, Germany, Switzerland and Italy, where, at the request of the president of the fund for adult education of the Ford Foundation, Pasadena, he made an evaluation of the benefits, attitudes and reaction of returned students who had visited the United States.

"There are at present," says Dr. Bird, 32,000 exchange students in 1,200 educational institutions in America."

Dr. Bird was also sponsored by the Phi Beta Kappa Association in the investigation.



This complete story of Pacific Telephone in 1952 is yours for the asking at your Pacific Telephone Business Office.

1952: A Year of Telephone Progress for You

We've been building fast to bring still more service, still better service, to all the Pacific West

At work today in the Pacific West are more telephones than ever before in history. And the service they provide is better than ever, too. For 1952 was a year of progress for Pacific Telephone, as have been all the years since the end of World War Two. Because the telephone is so important to everyone in the West today, we'd like to give you a quick report on this past year... taken from our Annual Report for 1952.

1952 Highlights

- Every day, Pacific Telephone spent half a million dollars on construction.
- Improvements in wages and related benefits for telephone employees amounted to more than $21,000,000 annually.
- Total taxes per telephone in 1952 amounted to $37.17. This means an average tax of $3.10 per telephone per month — almost double what it was ten years ago.
- Microwave radio relay facilities were extended to Portland, Seattle and San Diego ...helping us to handle more long distance calls than ever, and bringing network television to these cities for the first time.

YOUR TELEPHONE IS ONE OF TODAY'S BEST BARGAINS

New telephones went in fast. More than a million people in the Pacific West applied for telephones during the year. In most cases we were able to install them without delay. Enough telephone buildings, new lines and equipment were built during 1952 to serve the total needs of a new city the size of San Francisco. At the same time we continued to make the telephone needs of national defense our first order of business. And in both military and civilian service, 1952 was a year of telephone progress. And we'll do all we can to match it in the years ahead.

THE NON-KIBITZING CADDIE

BEGINNING HIS ELEVENTH YEAR as the Peninsula's number one golf caddie this week is Mr. Wong.

He can be seen most weekends following his master, Wayne Edwards, a Monterey High School history teacher, around the course at the Pacific Grove Municipal links, and on occasion at the Peninsula's four other courses.

Wong --- still sprightly as a pup despite his age --- 66 in human terms --- he could well be labeled the iron-dog of golf. He has trod some 5500 miles around the fairways.

But the nice thing about the furry-haired chow, is that his fee does not vary with the cost of living. Just the price of dog food.

He is strictly a local product. Wayne purchased the pup when he was eight weeks old as a present for his wife Mary.

He started breaking the pup to the narness at one year.

Training a chow, whose ancestors still are pack dogs in Siberia was no trouble at all, he says.

"At first he balked, so I attached a stick to the harness and let him carry that around. The second day he was ready for the green."

WONG ALWAYS RUNS down the side of the fairways in the best traditions of the golfing code. He usually stays slightly to the rear of his master. But after the putting green has been passed he bounds on ahead to the next tee. Naturally, he knows every course by heart.

Wayne, who shoots in the low eighties, gives his dog a high rating as a caddie: "One of his best points is that he doesn't offer advice."

Wayne, however, admits that the Chow does occasionally give him a bad time.

"Once, when I was playing in a foursome and all set to clear a hole under par, a stray cat chanced on the course.

"Needless to say I missed the hole and it took me an hour to catch up with the dog and the clubs."

Wong would appear to be Wayne's dog. But his wife, Mary, jokingly reminds her husband now and then when strangers admire Wong, "Don't forget to tell them he's my dog."

JEAN WILDER OF PEBBLE BEACH has trained one of her three Australian Shepherds - Robert, the short-haired one - to dig in her garden drainage ditches for her. "Or rather," says Jean, "he taught himself."

The routine involves calling Robert, pointing to a spot on the ground and saying, "Robert, dig'em up." And Robert, probably expecting a gopher or rat for his labors, digs. When Jean feels that he has accomplished enough in one spot, she points to another spot near it, and Robert obliges. And so the ditch grows.

"If I could train him to hold a hose and water the garden, I'd have the whole thing licked," comments Jean.

Senator Weybret Backs Budget Cut

SACRAMENTO-- Senator Fred Weybret of Monterey County, member of the finance committee of the upper house, last week added his endorsement of a strong move in the Senate to cut the current proposed state budget by $39 million. He also called for an end to deficit State financing.

Weybret joined Senator Ben Hulse of Imperial County, chairman of the powerful finance committee in recommending that the committee consider no tax increase measures until all efforts have been exhausted by the legislature to cut the budget by at least the $39 million recommended by the legislative auditor.

"If the legislature can cut the budget by that amount and use $47 million of the $66 million now in the State treasury," Weybret said, "there will be no necessity for a tax increase this year, and we will have a surplus of $19 million at June 30th of this year."

GOP Meetings Open To Public

All sessions of the Republican State Central Committee meeting tomorrow and Sunday in San Francisco will be open to the public, it was announced by State GOP Chairman Laughlin E. Waters.

He said at least 500 or 600 persons from all parts of California are expected to attend the two-day sessions in the St. Francis Hotel. It will be the first meeting of the California Republican Party organization since the election of President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Gov. Earl Warren is scheduled to deliver the opening address tomorrow. Alan Pattee of Salinas, chairman of the County Chairman Committee, will speak Sunday morning.

Slow Drivers Told Stay In Right Lane

The California Highway Patrol issued a reminder to slow drivers yesterday that despite the appearance of European sports cars on the roads, the American system of keeping to the right is still in use.

Patrol Chief E. Raymond Cato said four-lane highways seem to have created a new type of driver who knows which two of the four lane is his, but who pokes along on the inside lane, posing a hazard for the normal flow of traffic.

Chief Cato pointed out that the Vehicle Code was specific in its provisions on "keeping to the right."

He quoted the applicable section of the Code as stating, in part, "any vehicle proceeding at less than the normal speed of traffic... shall be driven in the right hand lane... or as close as practicable to the right hand edge or curb..."

Weston Exhibits

Photographs by Edward Weston are now on exhibit at the Mills College gallery, Oakland. The exhibition, which also includes the works of other photographers, will run through next Friday.

AT EASE! -- A NEW WEEKLY FEATURE OF MILITARY ANECDOTES

Goldbrickin' is a term familiar to most military personnel. Not necessarily in this category, but controversially associated with it, is the unusual history of the murals of the Soldiers Service Club at Fort Ord.

The club, envisioned by the late General "Vinegar Joe" Stilwell's dream for giving the enlisted man a break, was started before the entry of the United States into World War II.

The General, in a search of his division, found a couple of privates that had been artists in civilian life. Aware of how easy it is to lose good men to other commands, the General had them assigned directly to him.

Shortly afterwards the war with Japan broke out and the General went to the Far East to take over the China-Burma-India command. The artists were completely forgotten. They didn't seem to mind it at all. Directly assigned to the General, nobody could touch them. They worked when they pleased, and for their convenience they arranged to do most of their work in a Monterey public hall.

In addition, they had an arrangement to draw pay at the Presidio and maintained private residences in town.

When they ran out of painting supplies Mrs. Stilwell was notified, and she sent a requisition to the General across the seas to sign.

This pleasant way of life went on for at least a year. It was interrupted one day when a Monterey Peninsula Herald reporter -- nobody associated with this paper -- chanced in upon them and asked them what they were doing.

A news item followed: a big row occurred in the War Department and to make a short story of it the artists turned in their pens for guns. The reporter, by the way, was soon drafted into the Army.

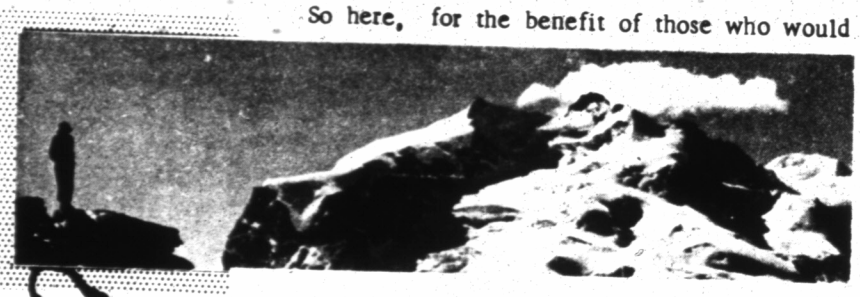
quick visits to sundry places

EUROPEANS IN CARMEL sometimes have a most peculiar sensation. They suddenly feel for an instant as if they were in Europe.

This sensation has nothing whatsoever to do with Carmel cottages, the refreshing lack of neon lights, that sort of thing. It's a feeling that comes from the momentary texture of the air, from a sudden silence, from a fleeting concoction of smells.

It's not surprising therefore that also the reverse is true: Carmelites abroad feeling for a moment that they are back in Carmel.

So here, for the benefit of those who would like to recapture



Carmel in Paris, Interlaken, Rom, Salzburg, Maidenhead or Porto Fino this summer, are a few brief glimpses of European travel opportunities.

AUSTRIA IS PROBABLY THE BEST BET for vacationing Americans who don't want to leave all their money in Europe.

The exchange rate is extremely favorable. The schilling is cheap. Prices are amazingly low. And a dollar buys a lot in the way of scenery, Wiener Schnitzel, Salburger Nockerln, crisp-sheeted beds, Heuriger and junior Third Man fun.

In that last category, take the trip from Paris to Vienna. It hardly ever pays to put your passport away. Assuming you follow the route of the Arlberg-Orient Express, this is what happens:

The French check you out at Basle and the Swiss check you in. The Swiss check you out at Buchs and the Austrians check you in twenty minutes later at Feldkirch, which is on the other side of the fairy tale principality of Liechtenstein whose capital, Vaduz, is much too tiny for a smug train like the Orient Express to bother with.

A few minutes after the Austrians come the French MPs -- I presume they are still doing it --- and a few hours later American MPs to repeat the passport procedure.

Chances are they'll be a couple of cherry-cheeked post-war rookies who'll grin at you. You'll treasure this smile. It's the only one you'll ever get from Europe's countless passport peekers.

The train crosses a bridge then, and it's the Russians' turn to glower at your papers. The rock-faced scrutiny of the two train-hopping, bemedaled tovarich would be much more impressive if it wasn't so obvious that they can't read English.

The passage through the Russian Zone, however, is smooth as long as you have a "grey card," which has to be obtained in Paris or at American military headquarters in Salzburg.

Vienna, with most of its bombing rubble cleared away, is a beautiful city. There are a number of hotels --- quite crowded --- where a clean double room with running hot and cold water is available for about $2 a night. At a first class hotel, like the Bristol, it'll cost you about $4 for a double.

Railroad fares are even cheaper by comparison. A sleeper trip from one end of the country to the other runs less than $20, provided the ticket is bought in Austria. Outside of Austria it costs more. Why, I don't know.

Buying things to take home is not quite so cheap. But most shops, even the very best, take greenbacks at the prevailing sidewalk value. The difference between this and the official rate varies. Nowadays the gap is almost negligible.

One of Austria's loveliest areas is for the most part quite unspoilt. It's the Salzkammergut, a region of lakes, mountains, waterfalls and salt mines (thus the name: salt chamber) which the British have discovered long ago but which has somehow been overlooked by Americans. m home for most Americans. Some Americans (this writer included) prefer Rome by far, but they are in a minority.

Paris always has a vast transient contingent of American visitors. It has also a large, semi-permanent population of American government officials, pin-striped businessmen from Toledo, Ohio, Iowa City, and newly-bearded sophomores, boys with long hair and girls with short hair, from almost everywhere. At the height of the season, there are more Americans in Paris than live in all of Monterey County.

Moneywise, France is still cheap for Americans, but the ride on the gravy train is over. The black market is finished. The sidewalk greenback sells for less than the legal one.

A full-course meal with wine in a decent restaurant runs about $1.40, tip included. Naturally you can spend more and you can spend less. You won't starve if you have only 50 cents to spend and spend it in the right place.

There is a relatively small number of hotels in Paris which provide all the "comforts" of American living. Rooms in these are hard to get without reservations. These are best made ahead of time, through a travel agent, or American Express. Average price for a room in such a first-class (but not luxury) hotel runs about $6 double.

American Express, incidentally, maintains a sort of post office in Paris where Americans can get their mail "general delivery" without charge. You don't even have to be their customer.

Away from Paris, with the exception of such fashionable resorts as Cannes, Nice, Aix-les-Bains etc., life is much cheaper. The best hotels (that's not saying a whole lot) cost about 90 cents a night, bugs and all.

Railroad fares are low. It's advisable not to travel third class. It's also advisable to carry along a waterbottle. With the exception of international crack trains, French railroads provide nothing but the seat.

ITALIAN TRAINS are probably the most discouraging this side of the curtain. They get worse the farther south you go. Even second class isn't safe. Stick to first or the Rapido (express self-propelled railcars) --- if you're even vaguely finicky.

Prices range pretty much like in France. High in fine hotels and low in the country.

The Italian Riviera is hard to beat for lush beauty. See Rapallo, Santa Margierita Ligure and Porto Fino.

Don't skip Sicily. This island is much like the Salzkammergut --- appreciated by the British and Central Europeans, forgotten by Americans. Taormina is one of the nicest places there to visit.

SWITZERLAND IS COSTLY, but it's worth it. Everything is expensive except watches and foreign currency. And verything is available. No shortages. There is just one thing you can't buy. That's night life. Everything shuts down tight a little after 10 p.m.

But you needn't be a millionaire to enjoy this healthy, wealthy and happy country of crystal-clear mountain lakes, white ice peaks and spotless bathrooms.

It's hard to stay out of tourist traps but it's possible. The cheapest places to eat and sleep are the prohibitionist ("Alkoholfrey") inns. Fine double rooms range from $1.50 to $3.50. Breakfasts in these establishments costs 30 cents; the average dinner, 60 cents. The food is excellent and served in huge quantities. No tipping.

THE SKYLINE of Dijon, France, in its medieval flavor is typical of cities in Central Europe.

Inns of this type are located in Aarau, Andeer, Arosa, Bale, Basle, Bern, Chur, Lugano, Lucerne, Montreux, Rapperswil, Romanshorn, Solothurn, Thun, Thusia, St. Moritz and Zurich.

It is also a good thing to keep one's eyes open and go to the places where the natives eat.

Swiss trains are tops. Third-class is cleaner and better than second, sometimes even than first, elsewhere. Fares are high.

To save: inquire about "Holiday Tickets" at Swiss tourist agencies or at main railway terminals at the Swiss border.

They See The World Through Stamps

The next meeting of the Monterey Peninsula Stamp Club will be held March 16, 8 PM in the Carmel High School. All stamp collectors and their friends are invited to come and bring any stamps which they wish to have identified. This is a chance to "stump the experts."

The door prize, arranged by Mrs. James Matney, secretary, was first won by L. S. Stallings, who refused in favor of another drawing. Russell J. Townsend of Carmel was the lucky winner on a second try. The door prize is a purchase order from the Stallings Stamp Shop.

Abbott Silva and Col. William Graham will be in charge of refreshments.

At the club's last meeting, March 2, Col. Harry Henry of Pacific Grove presided in the absence of E. R. Blankenship.

Thomas Dudley was appointed auctioneer for the evening. Many singles, block first-day covers and a sheet of Canadian stamps passed under Dudley's hammer, accompanied by much good-natured comment.

It was ruled that anyone who talked during the auctioneer's commentaries would be considered the next bidder. L. S. Stallings furnished the coffee and Mrs. Martha Kinney provided home-made, frosted cup cakes made with blackberry jam.

THORNE HALL
Editor

Gentlemen:

It is a pleasure to extend congratulations on your purchase of the Carmel Spectator and the Pacific Grove Tribune.

I know that you and your associates are looking forward to the opportunity of serving the people of the rapidly growing communities of Carmel and Pacific Grove. You are undertaking this service during exciting times in our State when each achievement brings extra satisfaction.

Best wishes for the success of your new venture.

Sincerely,

Governor

Dear George:
Congratulations on your new venture.
I know that you will give the people of Carmel a paper of which they will be proud.
Yours has been a tradition of the best in journalism--both here in Detroit and on the West Coast.
It is a great pleasure to see a former colleague become a publisher and to know that as a result, another newspaper will carry on the highest ideals of the profession.
With best personal wishes,
Sincerely,

Brewster P. Campbell

Congratulations!
The Examiner's loss is the Peninsula's gain.
Good local newspapers are important. They stimulate growth, civic progress, civic pride. I welcome the trend of top editorial workers taking over operations in smaller communities which certainly deserve the same talent and know-how to handle their news as big cities do.
Good luck! I am sure your decisions will bring satisfaction to you as well as your readers.

Josua Eppinger
Executive Editor
The Examiner

To the new owners of The Spectator;
Congratulations and best wishes
from the City of Carmel.

Mayor Horace Lyon

Dear George and Thorne:
Congratulations and lots of luck on your new ventures--the Carmel Spectator and Pacific Grove Tribune.
We will miss you on The Examiner. But we are happy that the people of your new "beat" will be treated to the same brand of superior journalism that you practiced so long here.
May your circulation and your spirits always be high!
Best always,

Caen

Gents:
Word reached me on the underground that you have purchased The Spectator and the Pacific Grove Tribune. For which, congratulations.
Since I am on the subscriber list (The Spectator), I shall watch the whole proceeding with interest. The more so because I used to be in the newspaper business myself. I had a route. Also I onced stuffed the inside in the outside of the Carmel Cymbal, a worthy predecessor.
What I mean, from falling hands to you we throw the torch. Be sure you hold it high. That way you don't singe your eyebrows.
On the level, best of luck,

Stanton Delaplane

Dear George:
Congratulations to you and Mr. Hall on the purchase of the Carmel Spectator and the Pacific Grove Tribune.
Also congratulations to the communities you will serve. From past acquaintance with you I know you will give those communities excellent newspapers.
Please keep me informed about your progress. I'm tremendously interested in the development of the offset process of newspaper production.
Sincerely,

My dear Thorne:

I have learned with a great deal of pleasure that you, George Bush and Shirlie Stoddard are going to be associated in the publication of the SPECTATOR and the Pacific Grove TRIBUNE. I think you are in a position to render the community a real service with your two weeklies. I hope you will have success.

Very sincerely yours,

S. F. B. MORSE

GETTING ACQUAINTED

Let's introduce ourselves.

We are Thorne Hall and George Bush.

We bought the Spectator a few weeks ago. We are the sole owners. This is our second issue.

We also bought the Pacific Grove Tribune.

Associated with us in the venture is Shirlie Stoddard.

We hope to make top-notch publications of both of them.

Starting with the issue of March 27, The Spectator will run a weekly photo contest for amateurs.

The winner will be paid $3 on publication of the photograph in The Spectator.

Any subject matter is eligible. Landscapes, human interest pictures, abstracts - anything at all.

Deadline will always be Friday preceding the issue for which the picture is submitted. Thus the first deadline will be Friday, March 20.

Pictures submitted must be at least 5x7 black-and-white glossies, with name, address and telephone number of the photographer clearly printed on a sheet of paper glued to the back. Exposure data is desired but not mandatory. Facts about the subject matter should also be included. No color prints will be accepted.

Only amateurs will be eligible. All prints used become the property of The Spectator and will not be returned. Photographs may be carried into the next contest week.

The Spectator reserves the right to cancel the photo contest at any time it desires, and not to pick any winner if all photographs submitted are deemed below par by The Spectator.

THE CARMEL SPECTATOR, a Carmel-Pacific Publication. Co-publishers -- Thorne Hall and G. S. Bush. Editor -- Thorne Hall. Executive Editor -- G. S. Bush. Associate Editor Shirlie Stoddard. Mailing address: Box AO, CArmel, Calif. Ph. 7-6451.

Published every Friday. Entered as a second-class matter at the Post Office at Carmel, Calif. Adjucated a newspaper of Legal General Circulation.

ARCHITECTS PICK BEST HOUSE SINCE 33

DOWN ON YANKEE POINT, five miles south of Carmel, stands a house of wood, glass and surf-chiseled boulders, whose unique features have just brought it the honor of being called "the best house built in Monterey County in the last five years."

This distinction was bestowed by three prominent architects, brought to San Francisco by the northern California chapter of The American Institute of Architects to judge recent building achievements in this area.

The judges were Pietro Beluschi, dean of the School of Architecture at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Edward Stone, associate architect for the Museum of Modern Art, and Richard Neutra, internationally-famous Los Angeles architect.

They found the Yankee Point house, originally built two years ago for Merchant Charles Sawyer, not only the best house built here since 1933, but also one of the five best houses built in northern California in that period.

The house, now owned by Ad-man Walter Reed Emmons who is thinking of leaving it and going for a trip to Mexico, was built by Architects Robert Anshen and Stephen Allen when Carmel Riviera Properties bought up 1,100 acres of the rugged coastline real estate for development. It was the first house built. The Carmel Construction Company did the job.

MOST STRIKING FEATURE of the two bed-room home is its terrace which runs along its length on the ocean side. This terrace is shielded by "climate control" louvres of Polyplastic, a translucent and weather resistant resin product.

These louvres can be left open to allow full view of the surf below and let in the salty seabreezes, or they may be partially or completely closed to shield the terrace and the rooms englassed behind it against fog, storm or the bright glare of the afternoon sun reflecting from the sea.

Tying in the house with its ocean-view setting are surf-sculptured boulders used extensively in its construction -- for fireplace and living room wall, angled to guide into the main entrance.

The house also has many other features. They include a two-way garbage and delivery box accessible from inside and outside; a passage between carport and bedrooms to allow for possible future expansion; a centrally-located kitchen with built-in indoor barbecue.

The house is long and narrow, completely surrounded by native plants -- sage, pine and wildflowers. To ease maintenance, its lawn was carpeted with pine needles gathered from nearby-pines.

Guide Dogs Drive

Setting themselves an $80,000 goal, Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc., is currently conducting a membership campaign.

Mrs. Marion Kingsland of Carmel heads the Peninsula effort, seeking local support with the help of captains Mrs. Olney Girard, Carmel; Mrs. Matthew Jenkins, Pebble Beach; Mrs. Douglas Bradburn, Carmel Valley; Mrs. William Stahl, Monterey, and Mrs. Fred Eggiman, Pacific Grove.

Eben Whittlesey, Carmel attorney, is an outstanding graduate of Guide Dogs' training school in San Rafael, where the blind and their dogs undergo together a pleasant four weeks of training.

Carmel Cartoonist Bill O'Malley Shoots Another Birdie With His New Book, "Golf Fore Fun"

ALL HIS LIFE, cartoonist Bill O'Malley of Carmel has played golf. As a kid, he caddied at the Claremont Country Club in Oakland, and as an adult, golf has been his favorite game.

But for the past two months he has missed playing even the nine holes he likes to sandwich into each working day. The reason? He's been too busy drawing a book on golf.

"A while back," says Bill, a trifle ruefully, "I had my score down in the 30's for nine holes. But since starting the book, I've gotten out of practice. For two solid months, I've thought of nothing but golf.

"I even stopped submitting to the national magazines. This is a pretty important project, you know, this deal of Helen's. But it's all over now but the selling."

"HELEN'S PROJECT" is O'Malley's forthcoming cartoon book, "Golf Fore Fun." Helen is Helen Lengfeld of Pebble Beach and San Mateo, or Mrs. Louis Lengfeld, if you prefer.

She's the energetic and ubiquitous publisher of "The Golfer," which, like most of her projects - she has a million of them - is also a project of the American Women's Voluntary Services (AWVS). She is also the only woman in this part of California, without a doubt, who manages to give the impression of being two places at once.

Well, for quite a while now, O'Malley has been sending "The Golfer" golfing cartoons.

"Every time I play golf and get an idea for a cartoon, I write it on the score card," says Bill. "I've got pieces of score cards all over the place."

Helen liked and used the cartoons and was an admirer of Bill's first cartoon book, "Two Little Nuns" which, bearing out her opinion of it (and the opinion of a few others), has sold over 300,000 copies. When she met Bill, she asked him what his plans were for a second book. "Oh, I might do a golf book some time," he told her.

"Well, I waited for that book," says Helen. "Next time I saw Bill I said, 'What about that book?' 'I haven't done it yet,' he said. 'But I could.'"

As Bill tells it: "During the Crosby Tournament at Pebble Beach in January we got together at Helen's for a drink, and I took over 26 roughs I had worked up. And it was decided: Helen and the AWVS would publish the book, with me to get my royalties and the AWVS to get the publisher's profits. The whole deal - 80 cartoons - went to the printer on the tenth of March. The book comes out May 1."

O'Malley, who explains that "there's nothing so stale and unfunny as a cartoon I drew the day before - to me, at least," wonders if "Golf Fore Fun" has the same type of humor, and in the same degree, as that which made "Two Little Nuns" such a sell-out. He needn't worry: there are laughs for everyone - not just golfers and golf widows - in the new collection.

"I have tried to balance the book so that everything doesn't take place on the golf course," he says. The one about the golfer at the hospital bedside of his wife, who has just had triplets, is a case in point. In the middle of a recital about his day's game, the golfer interjects "Oh, triplets, huh?" and then continues with his story. And then there's the one about the canny wife who wears earmuffs while her husband details his score. And there's a cartoon about a gent on a flying rug, and one about Robinson Crusoe. All with a golf theme, though.

SOME OF THE GOLF COURSE CARTOONS are not belly laughs, exactly. Rather, they point up,

as the game of golf does a man's character ("All the human traits, both good and bad, pop out on the course," says Bill), some of the foibles of humans and golfers, and any golfer should be able to identify himself with at least one cartooned character in the book. There's one about the golfers who courteously suggest that you shoot through and then won't wait until you're out of range before bombarding you with flying balls. There's one about the guy whose partner compliments him on his form and is thereafter so jittery he can't even hit the ball. And then there's the one about the golfers huddling in the clubhouse doorway waiting for a storm to pass. "Looks like it's clearing," says one to the other. "I see a spot of blue in the sky - I think."

Some of the cartoon situations really happened. But not many. "It might seem funny at the time, but an actual situation doesn't usually make a good cartoon. My ideas come better if I think: wouldn't such and such be funny if it did happen in a certain way?" Bill says.

However, the one in which one woman golfer says to another, "Oh, let's not count our putts today. It'll be much more fun," really did happen - to Ada, Bill's Norwegian wife. "I was hopping mad," she remembers. "And I've never played with those women again."

The book, according to Helen Lengfeld, will have national circulation. Not only will it go to all bookshops (watch for it on the Peninsula) - $1 a copy, but some 3000 golf pros will receive copies and will probably sell it; it will be placed in golf clubs in the United States, Canada and those outside of the country with which "The Golfer" has contact; it will, through the association the AWVS has with the Armed Forces, be placed in PX's and canteens, Helen hopes; etc., etc.

"We are really going to town on this thing," says Helen in her ebullient way. "I think it's going to be a good contribution to golf and fun. And as my friend Buzz Ham of the Washington Post says - it's clean."

Some of the AWVS profits from the joint O'Malley-Lengfeld venture will go toward the "Swing" clubs Helen has been instrumental in establishing in veterans' hospitals all over the country - miniature golf clubs where convalescents can exercise and practice. So she's very happy.

And Bill, who went from the San Francisco Call-Bulletin to cartooning for national magazines and success with "Two Little Nuns," has shot another birdie with his cartooning pen. - S.S.
